Intelligence and Strategic Decision-Making (MASL #P309149)

CCMR's one-week Expanded International Military Education and Training (EIMET) approved course entitled "Intelligence and Strategic Decision-Making" is conducted by a Mobile Education Team (MET). The key objective of this course is to examine the role and place of intelligence agencies in supporting strategic decision making. The course first examines the intelligence process and the intelligence activities, as well as the potential problems and challenges associated with the intelligence process. The course also discusses the connection between the Counterintelligence and Covert Action functions of intelligence to the overall intelligence structure and its effect on strategic-level decision-making relations. Next, participants analyze the relationship between policymakers and intelligence agencies. The educational approach of this course combines informational content along with practical exercises and case studies to provide participants with the skills and knowledge needed to understand how intelligence can best support strategic decision-making in a democracy.
