

Tyrone Groh, PhD

Tyrone Groh is a political scientist specializing in strategy and unconventional warfare. Dr. Groh is a retired U.S. Air Force officer with over 21 years of service. He received a bachelor's degree in aeronautical engineering from the U.S. Air Force Academy, a master's degree in security studies from the Naval Postgraduate School, a master's degree in strategy from the Air Force's School of Advanced Air and Space Studies, and a doctoral degree in government from Georgetown University. He flew F-16s for over 10 years and participated in overseas contingency operations throughout the world. He also served as an exchange pilot with the Royal Norwegian Air Force for two and a half years. Dr. Groh commanded a squadron of remotely piloted aircraft in support of Operation Enduring Freedom and the National Command Authority. He has done strategy work in the Middle East and South Asia and his research interests focus on the link between strategy, policy, and unconventional warfare. He has published on the challenges of ungoverned spaces in tribal regions in addition to his book about the use of proxy war as a means of foreign policy.